

WILDLIFE WEDNESDAYS WITH FOCRG

Song Thrush

This lovely songbird's population is in very serious decline and it is on the RSPB Red List of endangered birds.

We are lucky to have a few around the Rec, and you can sometimes see them bouncing around the children's playground when it is quiet, or flitting along the ground in the woods between the two Recs.

Blackbird

You can spot the black males and the brown females around the Rec. most days. Although it is one of the most common of the birds, it has a delightful mellow song that is wonderful to listen to if you stop for a minute to appreciate it.

Robin

Nothing says Christmas quite like a robin, but at the Rec we can enjoy seeing their jolly red breasts all year round! You will often see them singing merrily by the paths, but don't be fooled by their cute exterior, they are aggressively territorial – so as you pass be thankful you're not another robin!
